NYC Housing Partnership Appoints General Counsel

Crystal Kay has been named general counsel at the NYC Housing Partnership, New York City's primary nonprofit intermediary for the development of new and rehabilitated affordable housing.

Kay recently served as senior staff attorney in the Community & Economic Development Program of Brooklyn Legal Services Corporation A, where she represented nonprofit developers in large-scale affordable housing real estate transactions. She has extensive legal experience in project acquisition, predevelopment financing, construction/rehabilitation, and permanent loan financing for the development of affordable housing.

Previously, she served as an associate at Robinson & Cole, representing institutional lenders in complex affordable housing financing transactions, tax-exempt bond financing, and low-income housing tax credit (LIHTC) projects. She also worked as an associate at Cullen and Dykman.
